The narrative shifts in chapter 2 as Janie's history is revealed. As Hurston begins the description of the blossoming pear tree, the point of view shifts from Janie's voice to a third-person narrator who tells a story about Janie, rather than a story told by Janie. A new character is also introduced in Chapter 2.

Chapter 2. Landscaping the World: The Domus Complex. Scott's point in this chapter is that humans domesticated the planet more extensively than taming cattle and planting crops, and that this had deep consequences. He examines the changes that mankind has brought to its environment by being an artificial natural selection of sorts, to bring out plant types that are now unrecognizable from their progenitors and are also unable to survive without human care.
