Cities and the Wealth of Nations goes beyond that analysis of the economic lifecycle of a city to talk about the regions surrounding cities, how they feed into and are influenced by the city economy, and then to talk about non-city regions and the groupings they fall into. It is a reconstruction of macroeconomics around the city, rather than the country, as the fundamental unit.

That some cities are vibrant while others are in decline is starkly apparent. In The Wealth and Poverty of Cities, Mario Polèse argues that focusing on city attributes is too narrow. Cities do not control the basic conditions that determine their success or failure as sources of economic growth and well-being. Nations matter because successful metropolitan economies do not spring forth ...
