Managing Contract Changes

Obviously, contract changes complicate the contract management process, but it does not have to derail things altogether or lead to disputes. Here are a few simple ways that the contract management team can effectively handle contract changes: 1. Use ammendments or addenda to explain changes. The management team isn't always a part of the negotiations relating to a proposed change, and more than likely, they aren't really the ones that have the final say in approving any proposed change.

Managing Contract Changes

The goal of the Contract Manager is to manage change effectively, and in accordance with the contract, to limit impact on the contract and project scope, schedule and budget. Fortunately, the terms and conditions and any special provisions contained in the contract documents will govern the way the parties deal with this change.

The contract change control system is used to gather, track and communicate all the changes to the project management contract. Contracts usually come with the provisions to allow changes or include additional items into the contract. It is vital to take note that changes in the contract can affect the entire project scope and even the requirements of the project. The contract change control system is not only a process that modifies the procurement and contract.
