Dill (koper in Polish) was one of the most important herbs in Polish country cuisine. As early as the seventeenth century, Polish herbalists noted that dill was useful both as a digestive aid and flavoring. The leaves were used with meats, soups, and vegetables; the seeds were added to cabbage and to sausages.

To make an aromatic herb fire starter, gather old newspaper an assortment of herbs. Sage, basil and rosemary work well..Wrap the herbs in newspaper and secure the ends with raffia or cotton twine. As you pile the logs, tuck a few of the herb bundles underneath, allowing the newspaper ends to stick out. Then light the paper ends to start the fire.
