CINP is pleased that its relationship with Oxford University Press (OUP), as the publisher of our official journal, the International Journal of Neuropsychopharmacology (IJNP), has progressed very nicely since its inception in 2015. The move to OUP was associated with the IJNP becoming a fully open-access journal.

A recent electrophysiology study conducted in anesthetized macaque monkeys revealed that DOI produces a combination of excitatory and inhibitory effects in V1, exciting neurons with low firing rates and inhibiting neurons with high firing rates (Watakabe et al., 2009). Since neuronal firing in V1 is driven by visual stimuli, one possible interpretation is that DOI reduces the response to visual input while enhancing spontaneous internally-driven activity.
