According to the Edgar Cayce readings, we are all spiritual beings having a physical experience here on earth. Cayce said that all of us were created in the beginning. All souls were created in the beginning, all spirit of one spirit, Spirit of God, that spirit manifest in flesh, that spirit manifest in all creation, whether of earthly forces or Universal forces, all spirit being one spirit.

The Edgar Cayce readings span an astonishing 10,000 topics, but if I had to pick a favorite, I'd have to say it's the readings on nature. Because when I read what the sleeping Cayce said about nature—and the nuggets I've uncovered about animals—it means more to me and my personal soul journey than just about any other topic. Atlantis is a close second.

The idea of animism was developed by anthropologist Sir Edward Tylor through his 1871 book Primitive Culture, in which he defined it as "the general doctrine of souls and other spiritual beings in general." According to Tylor, animism often includes "an idea of pervading life and will in nature;" a belief that natural objects other than humans have souls.

I've been reading a lot of Tolkien lately. Notre Dame's motto—Vita, Dulcedo, Spes; life, sweetness, hope—would have resonated deeply with Tolkien because of his lifelong devotion to Mary. In fact, the drama of the Christian story informed everything Tolkien wrote. The intensity of his Catholic faith shaped his entire life and genius.
