The Rookery. Originally constructed in 1888, the Rookery Office Building is the oldest remaining high-rise in Chicago and was built by Daniel H. Burnham & J. W. Root. It's name probably came from the previous building on this site which was an old city hall and was a favorite roosting spot of pigeons.

The Rookery is located in lively, creative Clerkenwell. Tucked away, only a short distance from St Paul's Cathedral, the Bank of England and the Old Bailey, the only remaining early houses in Peter's Lane have been repaired and extended to create our delightful boutique hotel.
