People aren't caricatures even though that's how we see them through partisan eyes. I know so many people who disagree with me politically yet I value them because they're decent people. They're good parents. I'm humbled by their faith. They want the best for their families just like I do. They're struggling with the loss of loved ones.

Russian politician Aleksei Navalny has been at the center of a great deal of unrest in Russia of late. Currently under house arrest after receiving a suspended sentence for allegations of embezzlement, Navalny was the leader of demonstrations against Russian president Vladimir Putin several years ago, which is why it is strange that he would find himself aligned with a close friend of Putin's.
