Charles Darwin would have been horrified. So would Alwyn Rhys, who said that when you are standing at the edge of an abyss, progress is taking a step backwards..or turning around 180 degrees and walking forwards. Different kinds of horror are involved here. Rhys' kind is the one that looks at what humanity has done with and to Nature.

It was Charles Darwin who came up with this idea of the coy female. Vandermassen does not accept the term coy as she feels it demeans the female experience. She excuses Darwin his ignorant terminology however by explaining that his envisioning of his ideas were a product of his Victorian upbringing.
